

ECH ACCREDITATION REGULATIONS as modified by the ECH Council in April 2021

1. Homeopathic teaching programs eligible for accreditation may be provided by the following institutions:
  - independent individual teaching centers,
  - national federations of teaching centers,
  - homeopathic doctors' associations providing education and training.
2. Only those institutions that are members of the ECH may qualify for accreditation of their teaching program.
3. Institutions that apply for accreditation of their teaching program should submit their training program in English to the ECH. The training program should comply with the requirements as laid down in the ECH Medical Homeopathic Education Standards and/or ECH Guidelines for the training of homeopathic pharmacists.
4. The ECH Education subcommittee examines all the documented evidence that has been submitted by the institution and ascertains that it fulfills all the requirements of the respective standards. The ECH Council decides on the actual accreditation.
5. The ECH issues a certificate confirming that the teaching program and examination of this institution have been duly accredited.
6. The accreditation remains valid for a period of 6 years and is renewable.
7. The accreditation fee is valid for the 6-year accreditation period. The fee itself depends on the national situation, as follows:
  - independent individual teaching centers: € 100
  - national federation of teaching centers: € 200 for the first 2 teaching centers,
€ 50 for each additional center
  - homeopathic doctors' association: € 100

The accreditation fee is additional to the membership fee and should be paid when submitting the application.

8. Institutions whose teaching program qualifies for accreditation should pay their annual ECH membership fees during the years the accreditation is valid. Full member doctors' associations that provide training courses themselves pay their normal membership fee in proportion to the number of their members. Independent individual teaching centers and national federation of teaching centers pay €50.00 per annum per school from 2021.
9. Non-payment of membership fees in a particular year will lead to withdrawal of the accreditation.
10. Any fees should be paid by bank transfer; cheques will not be accepted. Any bank charges should be paid by the teaching center.
